

Future. How can science be made into a benefactor of Mankind after I have given you weapons and tools to destroy yourself?"

Mankind—"First the tools to destroy myself. That is what you have given me before I have started my future, but Nature told me she has many secrets, and we have found the worst first. There is only one way to change things.

And it is through you Science, you are going to bring us out of our confused goalless insightless today."

Science—"True, but I can only produce bits and pieces from day to day. The biggest piece of your puzzle is the exploding atom. We have exploded into other new parts of this as I have said, and we don't know its nature and what we can do with it. Today is limited in discovery, in categorizing discovery. We do have those that look above the discoveries and see how to fit them together, and they present the ideas not to you, not through the people, who do not decide the best way to use them, but through the oligarchy which holds the purse strings.

Many are thrown away, because of this, because the old system pays some too well. Science realizes this and continues on anyway categorizing, classifying, finding, identifying phenomena and holding it."

Mankind—"This I understand there is no reason we can not produce cheap radios and educate everyone of my people in the bush and have them thinking along the lines of an educated person in an industrial country, but yet