

bureaucratic hierarchical conditional rules, but enough for my stuffy nose.

There was a meeting of the ward with almost all the patients in attendance along with some of the staff judging. One younger male acted as mediator and asked all the people to give thier names and present problems and matters for discussion . All that was decided on was a close to the meeting.

I talked to my original doctor, Dr. L. today and a new doctor, Dr. M. My exchanges with them were pleasant, of short duration, and about my main worry, my priviledges. My priviledge I most desire is physical activity and I understand there is a place in the institutions for work outs which I need badly

.....

Loneliness

selves apart wanting

not touching,

gregariousness

compadery in games

someone gets to lose

Two players in the game of human relations, one takes the superior position the other

the other loses,