

The young scholar looks up from
His study and asks his invisible professor,
"If evil has been isolated
"That is, documented, and we can point
"These human fingers righteously in thier
"Faces and call down this evil and
"Reasonably prove our world, mankind,
"Art and science is being inevitably
"Destroyed by this evil,
"Why can this evil not be removed from earth?"

The young scholars hand shakes
To the page and pours out his answer,
I am good and assume that all men
Should have their cognitive processes
Ordered the same as mine, that
If actual good should be the operative
Priority in shaping of all
Action; that the solution to all
Problems of human existence
Lie in the misdefinition of these problems
And all the variations in the names of
These problems, should not all be solved
In the name of a readily apparent good?
What is good?
