There is no irony with angels;
They live in corrected time
As distant and untouchable as
Seraphim or Heroes, and the world
Perceives a static cosmology.
We would wish to think they would Come again other than in those
Individual reprehend visions.
As there is no irony among the angels
They hold no retribution, they
Have a simple cause masked to the Jades much simpler than the
Heralded superstitions, the mechanical hubris.
On this untapped plane they take
No notice and play a slow game,
Seeing no need to descend, as no one
Has a need to atone functioning
Well in a world of simple rules.

We are left alone to mourn the Crimes in this blink of the Heavenly animals, not that so
Many died, but that they died
Souless with eyes fixed on a mocking image.
